But Mr. Walker objected to as a sested vigorously agaist the brief states of the following the consideration of a bill to issue a duplicate check issued by Charles E. McChesney, an Indian agent, in favor of C. J. Froman & Brother, for $2.819, and yielded thirty minutes of it to Mr. Handy (Demacrat), of Louisiana. Some question was raised as to the right of Mr. Bailey to yield time and considerable friction developed.

"Of course the gentleman does not nean that," said Mr. Barley, "but if he loes, I denounce it as infamously false."

The situation immediately became trained, and when Mr. Handy launched its remarks which proved to be a ritieism of Hon. Thomas F. Baynard's ecent utterances on the money question, objection was made that his remarks were irrelavant to the bill, and hen he protested along the same line e was called to order by Mr. Daizell sepublican), of Pennsylvania. At this int Speaker Reed declared Mr. Handy at of order.

INTERNATIONAL TRADIC.

Belguim imports about $2,000,000 worth of lard annually, of which more than $22 per cent, comes from the United States, and the remainder from Holland and England, those from the latter being only about 1.5 per cent. The lard from the United States has gained its present market because of its continually satisfactory quality. All lard is free of duty, shipments usually being made in 460-pound kegs. Holland furnishes nearly all of the six and one-half milions pounds of oleomargarine, valued at $600,000, that is annually purchased. Factories for the manufacture of the latter commodity are located near Ant-

THAT APPLE STORY.

Said an old man who was an ardent ad-nirer of Noah Webster: Said an old man who was an ardent admirr of Noah Webster:

"Was Noah Webster: a plagiarist or did the English steal from him? I was led to ask these questions by being shown the Universal Spelling Book, published in Dublia in 1830 by T. Tegg & Co., which contains the story of the boy that stole apples, with an exact reproduction of the Websterian illustration. It runs as follows: "Anold man found a rude boy upon one of his trees stealing apples, and desired him to come down, but the young sauce box told him plainly be would not." Won't you?' says the old man. "Then I will fetch you down." So he pulled up some turts of grass and threw at him, but this only made the youngster laugh, to think the old man should pretend to beat him out of the tree with grass only. "Well, well," says the old man, "if neither words nor grass will do, I must try what virtue there is in stones." So the old man pelted him heartily with stones, which soon made the young clup hasten down soon finds the young chap hasten down from the tree, and beg the old man's pardon.

"Now, when I first re-d that story, something more than 50 years ago, no doubt entered my mind that it was made in Convecticut. And the picture accompanying it—was not that little house Jerry Griswold's, and the 'old man' Pless Pruden' And the boy, did he not bear a striking resemblance to me in my best white treusers' All these impressions remained until recently, when I saw the picture in the Universal Spelling Book, where it looked wonderfully Irish to me. I wish some of you fellows would find out whether Noah Webster was a plagiarist or the victim of British publishers.

"In the Universal Spelling Book' under the headline 'Words of Seven Syllables Acconted on the Fifth Syllable, I find circum-tna-viga-ti-on, and, under the line 'Words of Five Syllables Accented on the First Syllable, I find circum-tna-viga-ti-on, and, under the line 'Words of Five Syllables Accented on the First Syllable, I find circum-tna-viga-ti-on, and, under the line 'Words of Five Syllables Accented on the First Syllable, and having got so far I didn't wonder any more that some of my Irish brethren lind it difficult to catch on to the pronunciation of English words. But that is only a small part of what the 'Universal Spelling Book' contains. It has a treatise on English grammar, followed by the principles of politoness by Philip Stanbepe, earl of Chesterfield, and a number of fables, stories, etc., besides the 'Boy and the Apple Tree,' concluded the old man.—Utics Observer.
